The Shocking True Story of the Man who Created the Internet and the Man who Destroyed It

This is the true story of two men who meet only once. One is a pacifist, the other is a Nazi. Both men are visionaries, but their visions for the future of the world cannot be more different.

One man's vision is to harness data for peace, and a century ago he builds a world-wide-web to deliver exactly that. The other man's vision is to harness information to control the masses, and in 1944 he achieves that too.

This is the shocking truth about the man who invented the internet and the man who destroyed it.

Author Biography

Mel Croucher is the acknowledged founder of the British computer games industry. Originally an architect, he moved into gaming "to force my weird music on an unwilling public."

Among his innovations, he pioneered the first radio broadcasts of computer software, the first interactive soap opera, the first real-world adventure quest, the first computer-generated movie, the first AI virtual companion and the first million-user viral marketing campaign.

He is the author of text books, technical manuals, fiction and non-fiction, and over a thousand of his columns, investigations and cartoon strips have appeared in print over five decades.
